

Tomislav Rovis
Synlett Editor
Columbia University, New York
USA

Shannon S. Stahl
Guest Editor
University of Wisconsin-Madison
USA

Molecular oxygen is by far the most attractive terminal oxidant for catalyzed oxidations, one of the central transformations in organic chemistry. Guest Editor Professor Shannon Stahl has assembled a diverse set of experts in the field of catalytic aerobic oxidations, highlighting accomplishments and ongoing challenges in this important area.

Tom Rovis

Catalytic Aerobic Oxidations

A. Lei

J.-P. Lumb

M. Kanai

K. Oisaki

H. Tanaka

D. Yang

B. U. W. Maes

M. Shibuya

N. Jiao

Z. Li